WEATHER UPDATE (NWS): Doug Cramer, Warning Coordination Meteorologist –

Discussed - US National Weather Service Lake Charles Louisiana, Wednesday, March 12, 2025:

- Breezy today with a risk of severe storms this evening into tonight
- Stronger system arrives Friday, bringing strong winds and a risk of severe storms into Saturday
- Fair and seasonal weather returns Sunday into early next week

Discussed - LAKE CHARLES, LA (KPLC 7) Weather First Alert Forecast, Wednesday, March 12, 2025: Jacob Durham –

- High pressure remains mainly in charge for now, but that will change as we head through the overnight as a weak front approaches
- We'll still focus on plenty of sunshine and a gusty breeze heading to the afternoon as temperatures climb into the middle and upper 70s

- Clouds will be on the increase through the afternoon and especially the evening as the weak boundary slides in from the west
- Rain chances overall remain on the spotty side through the overnight with only a few stray showers while we are sleeping

- Quiet weather will quickly return heading into Thursday as we focus on abundant sunshine and a nice southerly breeze
- Thursday will likely be the first 80-degree day of the year as most locations may even climb a few degrees over the 80 threshold

- Spotty showers and storms return as we head into Friday afternoon as a more potent cold front begins to take shape north and west
- We'll still have to watch the potential for a stronger storm heading into Saturday, but trends continue to show the greater threat north and east

- High pressure will build back in heading into second half of the weekend keeping things nice and dry for Sunday
- Nice weather will stick around for much of next week as well with highs in the middle 70s before the next front heading into the middle of next week

Discussed - LAKE CHARLES, LA (KPLC 7) Weather First Alert Forecast, Tuesday, March 11, 2025: Jacob Durham –

- No complaints in the weather department as we head into our Tuesday as sunshine will be abundant with warming temperatures

- Highs will once again climb into the lower to middle 70s as winds have turned back out of the south and west
- It will be a little breezy throughout the day, but it'll make it very comfortable as well!
- A few clouds will begin to build as we head into Wednesday as moisture continues to increase ahead of a weak front Wednesday night into Thursday.

- Rain chances won't be widespread, but we may have just enough moisture in place we get a stray to spotty shower
- Our first 80 degree day looks to be on tap as well head into Thursday and even Friday as southerly winds really ramp up and coupled with sunshine.

- Friday will feature the change we have highlighted over the last week as showers and storms return to the forecast
- Spotty showers or a storm are possible heading into Friday afternoon, but most areas remain fairly quiet
- Better coverage of rain and storms arrives on Saturday and even then, it doesn't look like a total washout as the better coverage stays north and east

- Quiet weather settles back in as we head into early next week with temperatures staying steady in the middle to upper 70s
